

Stephen Garcia Throwing at Gators Pro Day...And Full of Jokes on Twitter

Jenna Laine - Bucs/NFL Insider

Posted April 7, 2015

Former Jefferson High School and South Carolina quarterback Stephen Garcia is out at Florida's pro day today. Why, might you ask? One Twitter follower did, and the response was pretty hilarious (unless you're a Gators fan).

Garcia's last trip to the Swamp was in 2010 and it went swimmingly well. The Gamecocks upset the the Gators 36-14. It snapped a 12-game losing streak in Gainesville and they won the SEC East.

But while Garcia makes a good point, some would point out that he didn't exactly get the last laugh. He was dismissed from the program five games into his senior season for violating teams rules (reportedly for alcohol use) and that was before the two teams faced off once more.

In all seriousness though, Garcia's in Gainesville to throw to former Gators tight end Clay Burton and some of the other receivers. Garcia and Burton have trained together at the Performance Compound in Tampa.

Garcia also recently threw to former USC wide receiver Nelson Agholor at a recent workout for Eagles head coach Chip Kelly.

He most recently played for the Tampa Bay Storm in 2014.